THE FIRST ALTERNATIVE EBOOK PRESS LAUNCHES CULT CLASSIC

WWW.NOBODYROCKS.COM

Seattle, WA –Nobody Rocks, the first American indie press to publish novels solely for the Kindle and Sony Reader, will launch The Last Stand of Mr. America on April 15. Jason Flores-Williams' cult classic was published in the UK in 2002, but never officially released in the United States.

"The emergence of Ebooks means new opportunities for less commercial novels that deal with controversial issues," says Nobody Rocks Founder, Greg Aden. "We need books to match the intensity of our times."

Last Stand is about a lost corporate soul trying to find meaning in plastic America. His life a prison of work, apathy and television, save for his sex club explorations and gallows sense of humor. "Jason Flores-Williams is an all-American outlaw and edgewalker in the tradition of Jack Kerouac, Charles Bukowski and Biggie Smalls. The Last Stand of Mr. America cuts into our heart of darkness with no bullshit bedside manner and no anesthesia." David Gates, Preston Falls, Jernigan.

Flores-Williams, who has been featured on CNN, NPR and Air America, is also known for his political activism. He wrote the High Times "Call To Resistance" and shut down Rockefeller Center in protest against the war. He is a frequent contributor to the Brooklyn Rail, Artillery magazine and does socio-cultural commentary for WBAI radio in NYC. Recently, feature film rights to Last Stand have been acquired by Melting Pictures, an independent film production company in Los Angeles.

"Disturb the powerful, empower the disturbed," says Flores-Williams. "They've already got TV – so why else be a writer?"
